

Dr Wong Sze Chai Peter

MBBS (London)

MRCP (UK)

MD (London)

FRCP (London)

Specialist in Cardiology

Dr Wong completed his primary training at The London Hospital Medical College, London in 1989.

After working at various teaching and district general hospitals in London, Humberside, and Essex, Peter took up a cardiac research position at the Royal Sussex County Hospital, Brighton. Peter has successfully completed his Doctor of Medicine degree at University of London, and his thesis centred on heart attack with a specific electrocardiogram appearance.

Peter completed his cardiac training in Birmingham, and took up his consultant position in 2001 at Aintree University Hospital, Liverpool. Liverpool has a higher level of cardiovascular diseases compared with the rest of the UK. Peter specialised in managing elderly as well as younger patients, with frequent combination of both cardiovascular and other medical problems. He has a specialist interest in cardiac imaging such as echocardiography and computed tomography. He is also accredited in advanced life support.

Beside his doctoral thesis, Peter has published or presented 50 research articles in various UK, European & US conferences and journals. His research interests include heart attack, management of chest pain, hypertension, heart failure and cardiac imaging.

In 2012, Peter has successfully applied for his accreditation as a cardiology specialist with the Hong Kong Academy of Medicine. He has relocated from Liverpool to Hong Kong in order to spend time with his parents.

Peter's mission is to use his existing experience and new skills in improving disease management and reduce suffering.
